Bilateral ovarian abscess proved radiographically but made the clinical diagnosis virtually impossible. Although it is uncommon for a pathologic process to involve the ovary as the sole site, bilateral ovarian abscess should be included in the differential diagnosis of a patient with acute renal failure and pelvic pain. Serum β-human chorionic gonadotropin levels should be added to the evaluation of these patients.The present invention relates to a process and a device for recovery of the krypton, which is typically obtained together with the xenon from the cracking of gaseous mixtures obtained by the use of natural gas, petroleum, coal, etc., in the production of energy by the well known type of air separation processes referred to as Claus process. The gaseous mixtures obtained from the gasification processes contain krypton, xenon and hydrogen along with various contaminants, and these mixtures are in fact commonly used as fuel for the Claus reaction in which the krypton and xenon are mainly converted into elementary chlorine and to be free of them and the hydrogen is largely released. It is also known that the gaseous mixtures obtained from the gasification processes are commonly used as fuel or to be purified for the production of chlorine by chlorine-alkali processes and that these mixtures are in fact commonly used as fuel in the aforementioned processes, in such a manner that part of these mixtures is used directly to produce the chlorine gas and to the rest of the mixtures is added the krypton and xenon which are released from the chlorine and that in this manner the production of this gas is fairly restrained. The quantity of krypton and xenon released in the aforementioned manner is however, not exactly known because they are obtained along with the hydrogen, which is not usually separated by the said Claus reactions and therefore it is hardly possible to refer to such quantities of krypton and xenon from the aforesaid mixture, from which they are released in the manner mentioned above. f678ea9f9e
